IN these days the Lord appears to be "turning the hearts of the fathers to the children," and bringing many thousands of the young into the fold of the Good Shepherd. It is with the sincere desire to aid in this blessed work, that this book has been written.

The author believes that children may be as easily interested in religious truth as in anything else, if it is presented to them in a manner suited to their capacities; and the simple elements of the Christian Faith may be as easily understood by a little child as by a learned philosopher. The Good Shepherd has provided food for the LAMBS as well as the SHEEP.

In these pages the author has aimed at simplicity of thought rather than of language, avoiding what might seem puerile; but he has used the colloquial style, as best adapted to the minds of children.

It is believed that there are thousands of children, of serious, inquiring minds, who will be glad of instruction on the subjects treated of in this book; and it is hoped that it may prove an acceptable present from parents to their children.
