THE PERSONAL NOTE

THE authorised Life of Lovat is being written by other hands than mine; nor does this volume make any pretence to enter that more elaborate field. I was probably Lovat's most intimate friend; to me he was as a younger brother. These pages but give the impression of the man as I knew him and of him—the Man, his Art, his Career, and his Significance. Herein are gathered together various appreciations that I have written upon him from time to time, with some more considered estimates of his many activities, of which few could so fully write since no other wholly knew. That I championed him when there were none to give him praise is my sole excuse for adding to the literature that is arising about his dandified wayfaring.

Hail and Farewell!

H.M.
