

A SHORTER FROISSART: BEING SELECTIONS FROM
THE CHRONICLES OF FROISSART

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649229253

A shorter Froissart: being selections from the Chronicles of Froissart by F. J. Tickner

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

F. J. TICKNER

A SHORTER FROISSART: BEING SELECTIONS FROM
THE CHRONICLES OF FROISSART

A TEMPORARY BESIEGING FORT OF TIMBER.

(From Froissart's "Chronicles of England.")

A SHORTER FROISSART
BEING SELECTIONS FROM THE
CHRONICLES OF FROISSART

Edited by
F. J. TICKNER

21372
THOMAS NELSON & SONS LIMITED
LONDON EDINBURGH PARIS MELBOURNE
TORONTO AND NEW YORK

THE LIBRARY
RESURRECTION COLLEGE

Jean Froissart, often known as "Sir John Froissart," was born at Valenciennes about 1337. He became a priest, but spent most of his life in writing and in travelling in Britain and western Europe. He died at Chimay in 1410. His famous "Chronicles" were written in French between 1357 and about 1400, and deal with the period 1326-1400.

John Bourchier, Lord Berners (1467-1533), translated the "Chronicles" into English at the suggestion of Henry VIII., and they were published by Pynson, the first volume in 1523, the second in 1525.

CONTENTS

Introduction . . . . .	xi
From Lord Berners' Preface . . . . .	17
I. Here beginneth the prologue of Sir John Fraissart of the chronicles of France, England, and other places adjoining . . . . .	21
II. Hereafter is told the cause whereby the war arose between the kings of France and England . . . . .	22
III. Of the government of King Edward the Second of England . . . . .	23
IV. How the Queen of England went and complained her to the King of France, her brother, of Sir Hugh de Spencer . . . . .	25
V. How Queen Isabel departed from France and entered into the Empire . . . . .	27
VI. How the Queen Isabel arrived in England with Sir John of Hainault in her company . . . . .	29
VII. How the Queen of England besieged the king, her husband, in the town of Bristol . . . . .	31
VIII. How that Sir Hugh de Spencer the elder and the Earl of Arundel were judged to death . . . . .	34
IX. How King Edward and Sir Hugh de Spencer were taken and delivered to the queen and to her son as prisoners . . . . .	35
X. The Coronation of King Edward the Third . . . . .	37
XI. How that King Robert the Bruce of Scotland defied King Edward . . . . .	39
XII. Here the history speaketh of the manner of the Scots and how they can war . . . . .	40
XIII. Of the death of King Robert the Bruce of Scotland . . . . .	41
XIV. How King Edward of England took the town of Berwick against the Scots . . . . .	45
XV. How King Edward was counselled to make war against the French King . . . . .	51
XVI. How certain nobles of Flanders kept the Isle of Cadsand against the Englishmen . . . . .	52
XVII. Of the battle of Cadsand between the Englishmen and the Frenchmen . . . . .	53

XVIII. How King Edward of England made great alliances in the Empire . . . . .	55
XIX. How King Edward of England was made Vicar-General of the Empire of Almaine . . . . .	57
XX. How King Edward and all his allies did defy the French king . . . . .	59
XXI. How that after the said defiances made the Frenchmen entered into England . . . . .	60
XXII. Of the battle on the sea before Sluys in Flanders between the King of England and the Frenchmen . . . . .	61
XXIII. How the King of England besieged the city of Tournay with great power . . . . .	64
XXIV. How the Scots won again great part of Scotland while the Siege was before Tournay . . . . .	65
XXV. Of the great host that the French king assembled to raise the Siege before Tournay . . . . .	68
XXVI. How the Siege before Tournay was broken up by reason of a truce . . . . .	69
XXVII. Of the order of Saint George, that King Edward established in the castle of Windsor . . . . .	72
XXVIII. How the King of England came over the sea again . . . . .	73
XXIX. How the King of England rode in three battles through Normandy . . . . .	76
XXX. Of the great assembly that the French king made to resist the King of England . . . . .	77
XXXI. Of the battle of Caen, and how the Englishmen took the town . . . . .	80
XXXII. How the King of England came nigh unto Paris with his host . . . . .	83
XXXIII. How the French king followed the King of England in Beauvais . . . . .	86
XXXIV. Of the battle of Blanche-taque between the King of England and Sir Godemar du Fay . . . . .	89
XXXV. Of the order of the Englishmen at Cressy, and how they made three battles afoot . . . . .	92
XXXVI. The order of the Frenchmen at Cressy, and how they beheld the demeanour of the Englishmen . . . . .	94
XXXVII. Of the battle of Cressy between the King of England and the French king . . . . .	95
XXXVIII. How the King of England found the prince, his son, after the battle . . . . .	101
XXXIX. How the King of England laid siege to Calais, and how all the poor people were put out of the town . . . . .	101
XL. How the King of Scots, during the siege before Calais, came into England with a great host . . . . .	103

Contents

vii

XL I. Of the battle of Nevill's Cross between the Queen of England and the King of Scots . . . . .	104
XLII. How John Copeland had the King of Scots prisoner, and what profit he got thereby . . . . .	106
XLIII. How the King of England lay at the siege before Calais . . . . .	109
XLIV. How the King of England made the passages about Calais to be well kept, that the French king could not approach to raise the siege . . . . .	110
XLV. How the town of Calais was given up to the King of England . . . . .	111
XLVI. How the Queen of England interceded with the king for the six burgesses of Calais . . . . .	113
XLVII. How the King of England re-peopled the town of Calais with Englishmen . . . . .	117
XLVIII. Of the assembly that the French king made to fight with the Prince of Wales . . . . .	119
XLIX. Of the great host that the French king brought to the battle of Poitiers . . . . .	120
L. Of the order of the Frenchmen before the battle of Poitiers . . . . .	123
LI. Of the battle of Poitiers between the Prince of Wales and the French king . . . . .	124
LII. Of two Frenchmen that fled from the battle of Poitiers, and two Englishmen that followed them . . . . .	131
LIII. How King John was taken prisoner at the battle of Poitiers . . . . .	133
LIV. How the Englishmen won greatly at the battle of Poitiers . . . . .	136
LV. How the prince made a supper to the French king the same day of the battle . . . . .	138
LVI. How the prince returned to Bordeaux after the battle of Poitiers . . . . .	139
LVII. How the prince conveyed the French king from Bordeaux to England . . . . .	141
LVIII. Of the death of King John, and the Coronation of King Charles the Fifth . . . . .	143
LIX. Of the death of Edward, Prince of Wales . . . . .	144
LX. Of Sir John Hawkwood and his company . . . . .	145
LXI. How the Englishmen that were sent into Brittany were tormented on the sea . . . . .	146
LXII. How the commons of England rebelled against the noblemen . . . . .	147
LXIII. The evil deeds that these commons of England did to the king's officers, and how they sent a knight to speak with the king . . . . .	151

LXIV. How the commons of England entered into London, and of the great evil that they did, and of the death of the Archbishop of Canterbury and divers others . . . . .	155
LXV. How the nobles of England were in great peril to have been destroyed, and how these rebels were punished and sent home to their own houses . . . . .	160
LXVI. How the king punished of these traitors the chief masters . . . . .	169
LXVII. How Sir John Froissart, author of this Chronicle, departed out of France and went to the Earl of Foix, and the manner of his voyage . . . . .	171
LXVIII. How the Prince of Wales made Sir Pier Ernauld captain of Lourdes in the county of Bigorre . . . . .	173
LXIX. How Sir John Froissart journeyed in the country of the Earl of Foix . . . . .	175
LXX. Of the great virtuousness and largess that was in the Earl of Foix . . . . .	181
LXXI. Of the state or ordinance of the Earl of Foix . . . . .	185
LXXII. How Sir John Froissart came to the true knowledge of all the matters contained in this history . . . . .	186
LXXIII. How the Earl Douglas won the pennon of Sir Henry Percy at the barriers before Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and how the Scots burnt the castle of Pontland, and how Sir Henry Percy and Sir Ralph his brother took advice to follow the Scots to conquer again the pennon that was lost at the skirmish . . . . .	187
LXXIV. How Sir Henry Percy and his brother, with a good number of men at arms and archers, went after the Scots, to win again his pennon that the Earl Douglas had won before Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and how they assailed the Scots before Otterburn in their lodgings . . . . .	193
LXXV. How the Earl James Douglas, by his valiantness, encouraged his men who were repulsed and in a manner discomfited, and in so doing he was wounded to death . . . . .	197
LXXVI. How in this battle Sir Ralph Percy was sore hurt and taken prisoner by a Scottish knight . . . . .	199
LXXVII. How the Scots won the battle against the Englishmen beside Otterburn, and there were taken prisoners Sir Henry and Sir Ralph Percy, and how an English squire would not yield him, no more would a Scottish squire, and so died both . . . . .	202
LXXVIII. How Sir Mathew Redman departed from the battle to save himself; and how Sir James Lindsay was taken prisoner by the Bishop of Durham . . . . .	204