SIBERIAN CUFFS.

NINE shades of wool used double, or double Berlin, either in shades of sable or chinchilli, look best. Cast on sixty stitches, knit three plain rows with the darkest shade; in the fourth row seam two stitches together; pass the wool round, seam two together; pass the wool round, seam two together, and so on till the end of the row. Join on the next shade, and knit three plain rows. In the fourth row, seam two together; pass the wool round, and seam two together the same as before; continue in this manner knitting three plain rows and an open row of each shade, until the ninth of white. Only knit two plain rows; this will reverse the shades: join the second lightest shade, and knit one plain row and one open row ; two plain rows ; continue knitting one plain row, one open row, and two plain rows of each shade ; it will then correspond in appearance with the other side ; then sew the two edges together, and let the join come in the centre of the wrong side, and it will look as though knit double.

LEAF PATTERN FOR A PIECUSHION.

Cast on each needle forty-five stitches, fifteen for each pattern. First round—pass the thread in front, purl two, knit one, taking the back part of the loop ; purl two, slip one, knit one, and bring the slipped stitch over the last knit, knit six, bring the thread forward ; knit one ; continue this till the round is completed. Second round—thread before, purl two, knit one, taking the back part of the loop ; purl two, slip one, and cast the slipped over ; knit the remaining stitches plain ; in the first row you have increased one stitch in every fifteen ; the second brings them to the original number ; knit these rounds alternately, making the holes (which occur in every
