PREFACE

Some years ago after my operations I conceived the plan to write a consolatory paper to be read among my dear ones in the shiva (days of mourning) after me. A man who had been three times on the operation table does not feel that he is pretty safe. My dear friend, however, Mr. Alex Katzenstein, thought I should write for a larger circle of readers. This book is the result.

It consists of poems, consolatories in prose, selections from Rabbincs and a service for the house of mourning. About the latter I have a word elsewhere in this book. And all I have to say about the other compartments is that the translations are direct from the original language.

You, my dear reader, will kindly forgive me, if I use this page to express my sincere thanks to Mr. Max Reiss, the president of the Shaari Zedek Cong., Brooklyn, for encouragement.

THE AUTHOR.
