PREFACE.

This book is a compilation from all available sources of the comparative results of homœopathic and other kinds of medical treatment, both in public institutions and in private practice.

For convenience it is divided into the following sections:

General Statistics—Death rates in the principal allopathic and homœopathic hospitals in Europe and America; results of hospital experiments to test the value of Homœopathy as a medical system. Statistics of cholera, yellow fever, pneumonia, typhus fever. Statistics of treatment of children in homes under each school of medicine. Statistics of asylums of the insane. A bibliography of statistical books and articles is given.

This is not an entirely exhaustive work. It has been the intention to include the most important statistics that have been published during the last fifty years and to present them in a form easy of access, while the bibliography includes further references.

To estimate the great number of books and pamphlets published on medical statistics it is only necessary to state that in the Index Catalogue of the Library of the Surgeon General's office at Washington there are seven large quarto pages of titles.

It is the wish of the compiler that this may be of some value to the student, and render easy of access the statistical tables that have been published and that it may conduce also to the spread and proper understanding of Homœopathy.
