DEDICATION

To Emy

IN accordance with your request, I offer you these short "Meditations."

You know that they are not intended to supersede your constant use of many far older and better books of devotions, but as a kind of expression of fellow-feeling and sympathy with you, in your earnest endeavours to attain habits of pure and fervent devotion. Dear Emy, in moments of strong and deep interest, we do not seek for one who can speak eloquently upon the subject,—but for one who has passed through similar joy or sorrow, and in whose kindling eye, and loving pressure of the hand, we find the sympathy and support we need to help us to bear that moment's too great fulness. Yes, thus do I now offer to you my little book, as the expression of loving sympathy, from one who is your fellow-traveller through things temporal. Pray God, that we and all we love fail not finally to attain those things eternal, which "pass all understanding;" and may often in our course, refresh each other's spirits with the sweet converse of those who love the Lord, and speak often one to another,—of which converse, we are told, that "the Lord hearkens, and hears it, and it is laid up before Him in a book of remembrance." Amen, my dearest Emy. Heaven for ever bless you.

Ever your very loving and faithful

CHARLOTTE-MARIA PEPYS.
