POEMS AND PARAGRAPHS

CRITICS AND REVIEWERS.

Critics there are of many sorts, And manifold propensities : First comes the man who merely snorts And straightway airs his densities,

He seizes on an author's book, Pretending to review it; But soon reveals the squinting look With which he means to do it.

No sooner finds he evidence That it may prove successful Then memory wakes in him the sense Of his own fate distressful.
