0 SONGS OF YALE. "And long may the song, the joyous song, Roll on in the hours before us, And grand and hale may the elms of Yale For many a year bend o'er us."-FINCH. Edward Clark Porter. NEW HAVEN: UBLISHED BY THOMAS H. PEASE. PRINTED BY J. H. BENHAM. 1858.

PREFACE.

THE history of College Music in this country extends at farthest over only a few years, and, so far as I can learn, Yale has been foremost among American Colleges in introducing, not only some of the best Songs of the German students, but also a good degree of that enthusiastic song-spirit, which so beautifies their University-life. Yet it is not twenty years since "Gaudeamus" was first sung at Yale. Previous to the introduction of this song I can find no evidence of the existence here of any distinctively studentsongs, either original or otherwise, with the single exception that it had long been customary, as at present, to close the exercises in Chapel on Presentation Day by the singing of a Parting Hymn or Ode, written for the occasion, by some member of the graduating class. Soon after "Gaudeamus" was brought here, however, original songs began to appear on the programmes of some of our exhibitions, and the custom, once established, has rapidly gained in popularity, until now the singing is a prominent and interesting feature in most of our festivals and exhibitions, as well as a constant source of enjoyment in our daily life.

The first collection of our songs was made in 1853, by Messrs-Root and Lombard. Their effort met with such approval that in a short time the edition was exhausted, and in 1855 a second was prepared by Mr. Root.

While in the present collection I have in the main followed the plan pursued by the former editors, it will be found that very many changes have been effected both in the matter and arrangement. The reason for these is apparent. A publication like this must necessarily assume, to some degree, at least, the character of a Periodical. Few of our songs are general enough in their nature to permit their being handed down from year to year. Every class now furnishes a complete sheet of new songs, for each of our great occasions. This custom, however, has been established quite recently, for I find the Alumni Song, commencing "Gather ye smiles, &c.," on three or four of the programmes for Presentation Day, and the songs "Audacia" and "When first the Fresh to College hies," were brought out year after year at the Wooden Spoon Exhibition.

PREFACE.

It is doubtless an excellent plan thus to draw out the poetical talent of each class in song-writing; but there is unavoidably connected with it this bad effect, that it prevents our having many permanent College Songs. Would it not be well if one or two at least of the songs for such occasions as the Biennial Jubilee and Presentation Day could be hallowed by the thought, that year after year, the same words have been, and will continue to be sung ?

In view of the fact that three or four years will make this collection quite out of date, it has been my first object in its preparation, to meet the wants of the "present generation of Yalensians." Therefore,—though I have retained such of the earlier songs as best illustrate the theory and spirit of our College life and customs,—I have given the preference, other things being equal, to those of more recent date. At the same time many pieces which have entirely fallen into disuse as songs, have been retained on account of their poetical merit, and one or two songs, which were formerly popular, have been restored with the hope that their intrinsic merit may bring them again into favor.

With my hearty thanks to those who have aided me in this undertaking, I bring the result to my fellow-students, hoping that it may not merely be valuable to us while connected with College, but that our interest in it may continue

> "When for us the song is ended, And the singing is no more."

The work of collecting and arranging these songs has been a pleasant one, and the longer I have been employed in it the more thoroughly I have been convinced of the value which these trifles will have for us in after years. It is a pleasing thought to me that to some of our number this little pamphlet may be one of those things which

> "When life's ray shall fade away To Evening's gentle warning, Shall still point back o'er manhood's track, To a spot where all was morning."

> > EDWARD C. PORTER.
