UNTRAVELLED TRAILS

*I would forsake the beaten thoroughfares,
The rutted roads down which the rabble ride;
Behold the byways beckon — unawares —
They seem to whisper, "Come! The world is wide;*

*On chartless seas spread your undaunted sails,
And fare forth boldly on untravelled trails!"*

*If Man is truly "master of his fate,"
And the unchallenged "Captain of his soul," Perchance the byways and "the Streets called Straight "*

*May find their ending at the selfsame goal;
I would not deem one pathway orthodox,
And bar all others with unyielding locks.*

*So let us leave the busy roads behind,
And seek the bypaths, overgrown with grass,—
Their silence and their solitude are kind;
What matter whether few or many pass!
Each soul must seek, alone, its Holy Grails
By questing bravely on untravelled trails.*
