PREFACE.

I have written my work during THE WAR. The idea of a collectivity of the States is interwoven allthrough my work, but, of course, the project of a League of nations, which has been elaborated during the armistice, could not be taken into consideration. This is, moreover, a subject-matter which can only be dealt with, in an experimental way, in future times. Besides, I dare say that my work does not fall short with regard to the plans of the day; so far as the juridical community of mankind is concerned, it is even ahead of its time.

CHAPTER II.

THE SYSTEM.

FIRST PART.

Public International Law.

First Section.

THE GENERAL DIRECTION OF PUBLIC AFFAIRS.

- § 1. The Sovereignty of the State and the Sovereignty of Mankind. 7
The sovereignty of the State. The qualifications to be given to the sovereignty of the State according to reasonable principles. The qualifications of the sovereignty in positive law. The religious and patriotic impediments of the evolution of positive law, as to sovereignty.
- § 2. The juridical Limits of the Sovereignty of the State. . . . 9
The principle. The State and the individuals. The State and mankind. The State and the other States.
- § 3. The territorial Limits of the Sovereignty of the State. . . . 11
Preliminary remark as to the relation between the territorial and the personal limits. Is it possible reasonably to trace the territorial limits of the States? How have the present frontiers been formed? May an evolution be expected? The juridical effects of modifications of the political frontiers. Various expressions, connected with "territory" and used in the language of international jurisprudence.
- § 4. The personal Limits of the Sovereignty of the State. . . . 14
Why do I consider "nationality" as the main point here? Nationality according to reasonable principles. Nationality in positive laws. Difficulties arising in practice. Are the germs of an evolution perceptible?

§ 5. Political Limits of the Sovereignty of the State	17
Preliminary remark. Federations, the members of which retain a limited sovereignty. Colonial empires. Protectorates, suzerainties spheres of influence, etc. Perpetual neutrality, guaranteed or not guaranteed. The international position of the Holy See.
§ 6. National Offices with an international Task	19
Explanation of the denomination. Sovereigns and other heads of States. Diplomatic envoys. Consuls.
§ 7. The general Direction of public Affairs of Mankind	21
The principle. The positive law. May the germs of an evolution be ascertained?

Second Section.

THE SOURCES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.

§ 8. National and International Sources of International Law	23
Are there national sources of international law? The sources of positive rules of international law. The limited and modest influence of the reasonable principles.
§ 9. Unwritten Law or Custom	24
Custom as a source of juridical rules. The acts of private individuals as a source of international law. Local customs and general or universal customs. Custom is a source of public international law as well as of private international law. How is the existence of a custom to be ascertained in international social life? International-common law. The evolution of customary international law.
§ 10. Written Law	27
National laws. The international statute-law and its substitutes. The first substitute: uniform national laws. The second substitute: law-making treaties. A parallel between the two substitutes. The evolution of the two substitutes.

Third Section.

GOODS DESTINED, ALTHOUGH ONLY IN GENERAL, FOR THE COMMON USE OF MANKIND.

§ 11. The Earth	31
The principle. The positive law. Can an evolution be expected?
§ 12. The waters	33
The liquid surface of the globe. The law of the high seas. The other aquatic surfaces.
§ 13. The Atmosphere	36
What may be the reasonable principle here? The beginning of a uniform atmospheric law and its future evolution.

Fourth Section.

TAXATION.

§ 14. General Views as to international fiscal Law.	37
The question as it ought to be put. Reasonable principles. The national treasury in positive laws. Are there any germs of an evolution? Matters to be submitted to a further investigation.
§ 15. Wealth, Income, and the specific Elements of both	39
Preliminary remarks. Is a reasonable principle to be established? The positive fiscal law and its evolution.
§ 16. Excises, Import and Export Duties on Commodities.	42
Their international side. Protective duties, according to the reasonable principles. Protectionism in the positive laws. Progress or regression?
17. Wealth, appearing irregularly.	44
Preliminary remark. Succession duty. The stamp-duty on bills of exchange.
§ 18. Rewards for administrative Services.	45
